

BRAND BOOK

Volume 01 · 2026 edition

Booth*funnel*

Photobooths that pay for themselves.

A film company that grew up.

Boothfunnel makes branded social photobooths for bars, restaurants, and event venues — built so every guest leaves with a branded photo on their phone, and the operator leaves with their email.

We sit at the intersection of two ideas: the analog photo as a moment — borrowed, branded, instantly shareable — and the modern operator's need for a marketing channel that builds a list while it builds a feed.

The brand reflects that. Modern grotesque sans does the work. An italic serif moment carries the heritage. The digital frame holds the world together.

Sophistication signals trust. We close $499 a month with quiet authority — not by shouting.

— Brand principle no. 01

The brand, on one page.

LOGO

Booth*funnel*

Logo system

Wordmark, seal, and how they live together.

The wordmark.

Booth*funnel*

PRIMARY · 110pt

ANATOMY

“Booth” in Söhne (Helvetica Neue alt) · tracking –20.
“funnel” in GT Sectra Italic (Georgia alt) · #B33A2A.

CLEAR SPACE

Padding equal to the cap height of “B” on all sides.
Minimum size: 120px on screen · 1.0” in print.

The seal.

Same italic serif voice as the wordmark. Used where the wordmark won't fit.

Default

The everyday seal.

Inverted

Dark surfaces.

Stamp

Uppercase

Embossed, formal.

USAGE Wordmark won't fit (favicons, avatars, watermarks). Or a stamp moment is needed (digital photo corners, email signatures, business cards). Or the wordmark would be redundant (back of card, hardware nameplates).

The lockup.

Seal and wordmark together — the most formal expression of the brand.

LOCKUP · LANDSCAPE

USE THE LOCKUP FOR the homepage hero, the cover of legal documents, signage, the title slide of any deck. Use the wordmark alone elsewhere.

ITALIC	pay for themselves	GT Sectra Italic · 1 phrase per page

The italic moment.

The brand's signature gesture. One italic-serif phrase per page, in red. Used as a director uses a motif — recognizable, restrained, never repeated within the same scene.

Photobooths that pay for themselves.

Voice.

Three principles. Hold them when in doubt.

01 Operator-first.

We talk to the bar owner and the GM, not the customer. Words like "floor," "shift," "cover," "weekend." If a phrase wouldn't make sense to someone holding a clipboard at 11pm, cut it.

YES "Get a booth on your floor before this weekend."

NO "Unlock the power of social-driven engagement."

02 Quietly confident.

We don't use exclamation points. We don't say "revolutionary." The product is good — that should come through in specifics, not adjectives. Sophistication signals trust.

YES "Most operators see ROI in week three."

NO "The most amazing photobooth ever!"

03 Specific, not abstract.

Numbers, places, times of day. Brooklyn at 02:14am. Saturday past 100 captures. The italic moment lands when everything around it is concrete.

YES "4,200 captures in 60 days. $1,400 of ads cancelled."

NO "Boost your social presence with our innovative platform."

In the wild.

Use it well.

The brand is a tool, not a constraint. When in doubt, default to restraint. The italic moment matters because it's rare. The red matters because most of the world is cream and ink.
